

Prof. Francesco Marotta, MD, PhD (Japan), MD degree specializing in Gastroenterology. Fellow in gastroenterology at Chicago University. Registrar in gastroenterology at the Groote Schuur Hospital, University of Cape-Town, South Africa. Japanese-spoken PhD at the Hirosaki University, Japan. Granted a Fellowship by the Japanese Ministry of Science at the National Cancer Center, Tokyo. Molecular biology stage at Wellcome-Beecham Labs. of London, and at GoodGene Lab. in Korea. Hon. Research Professor at Department of Nutrition and Food Science, Texas University, Denton, Texas, USA. Visiting professor in gastroenterology, oxidative stress, aging and nutrigenomics at major Asian universities. Directed a research centre in Japan in cooperation with Nobel Prize Prof. Luc Montagnier for 10 years. Editor and board member of over 25 PubMed-listed medical journals. Board Certified as an expert in Age-Management Medicine by Cenegenics Medical Institute, USA. Has received several international awards, the last being the Genomic Pioneer Award 2009. Co-founder of the research group ReGenera which is working on an innovative model of preventive/regenerative medicine. Has co-edited a successful book on aging-intervention and some book chapters on probiotics and vitamins. He has published more than 150 papers and presented 400 communications.